Four Seasons Private Residences Los Angeles

All North American Four Seasons Private Residences existed inside Four Seasons hotels—until now. “I saw Los Angeles emerging as a global gateway city,” says Genton Development Company CEO Jonathan Genton, who developed the inaugural stand-alone residences steps from the Four Seasons Hotel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills. “Removing the hotel component allows for a much higher level of service and emphasis on art, design and luxurious handcrafted materials.” The luxe new 12-story tower features 58 bespoke homes and a posh two-level penthouse—plus an indoor-outdoor Harley Pasternak-designed fitness center, a tiled saltwater pool, private cabanas, an immersive IMAX Private Theatre Palais, valet and 24/7 concierge services. Inspired by midcentury modern design, Martyn Lawrence Bullard custom-designed each clean, sophisticated abode with high-quality stone and terrazzo flooring mixed with leather, glass and steel. Elegant residences averaging 2,400 square feet epitomize California indoor-outdoor living with sliding glass walls and rooftop gardens, and experiences from personal trainers to celebrity chefs are available. Says Genton, “Living at the Four Seasons Private Residences Los Angeles is best described as living in a private hotel, designed and curated specifically for homeowners’ needs.” reflectionsofla.com
